Relative Reintroduction Page

Offer the relationship before expecting recognition.

An adult's remembered connection should be explained, not imposed as the child's memory.

Hypothetical example: A parent names the visiting cousin and explains the earlier meeting while allowing the child to say they do not remember it.

01 Carry the introduction instead of testing recognition

Confirm the person's relationship and the earlier contact you actually know.

Relative's confirmed name

Family connection to explain

Earlier contact actually known

02 Tell a true relationship story of suitable size

Prepare a truthful introduction without a memory test.

Introduction I will give

Memory claim I will not demand

Uncertain detail to leave open

03 Begin with something available today

Choose an ordinary present conversation starter and keep boundaries clear.

Present conversation starter

Visit arrangement to explain

Boundary that still applies

04 Correct the adult expectation kindly

Replace pressure for recognition with a kind adult explanation.

Pressure I may need to interrupt

My considerate adult sentence

Instruction I owe the child afterward
