Missing Belonging Search and Next Need Plan

Missing is a status to investigate, not a motive to assign.

Truthful descriptions give a search a useful starting point.

Hypothetical example: a child describes a missing sweatshirt, checks known locations with an adult and follows the venue's lost-and-found process before the family decides the next clothing need.

01 Identify the missing item

Describe the item and last confirmed location.

Exact identifying description

Last confirmed use or location

Memory or uncertainty to label

02 Trace the search

Record the locations actually searched.

Locations already checked

Location still awaiting a check

Adult arranging outside contact

Missing Belonging Search and Next Need Plan / Review & follow-through

03 Use the return route

Use the responsible lost-and-found contact process.

Actual lost-and-found process

Item identity to verify

Pickup permission or deadline

04 Meet the next need

Decide the immediate need and one suitable return habit.

Current found or missing status

Suitable alternative or replacement decision

One departure or return habit