New Hobby First-Try Plan

A child's first interest can differ from yours.

Support an optional first try without turning it into the parent's ambition.

Hypothetical example: a child tries one paper-model project while the parent keeps their own interest in music without requiring the child to choose the same hobby.

01 The interest

Let the child describe the thing they want to try.

Hobby named

Part that interests the child

Parent preference to keep separate

02 A modest beginning

Distinguish one task from ongoing enrollment.

First task proposed

Resources actually available

Instruction or supervision to confirm

New Hobby First-Try Plan / Review & follow-through

03 Adult decision

Explain the real limit and help offered.

Time or resource limit

Help the child wants

First-try decision actually given

04 After the try

Use the child's actual report for the next decision.

What the child reports

Instruction still unclear
