Read Mark 5 Without Making Two Suffering People Compete - working notes

One situation. Clear facts. An honest next step.

Read Mark 5:21-43 as an interwoven account. Keep the woman's encounter and Jairus's daughter visible without blaming one person's need for another person's suffering.

Hypothetical example: An adult arranges the agreed ride while another responsible person helps with a school concern, without labeling either child the cause of the other's difficulty.

01 Begin with Jairus's request and keep reading

Trace Jairus's request and the narrative's change of focus.

Jairus's request

Woman's reported need

Where focus changes

02 Let the woman's encounter have its own weight

Read the woman's encounter and Jesus' response without rushing.

Woman's action

Jesus' words

Health claim to avoid

Read Mark 5 Without Making Two Suffering People Compete - working notes / Review & follow-through

03 Return to the daughter without accusing the woman

Follow the report and the return to the daughter through the final care instruction.

Report received

Jesus' action

Final care instruction

04 Name the needed arrangement without ranking people's worth

Arrange present responsibilities without blaming a person for needing help.

Two present needs

Responsible arrangement

Unfair label to correct