Philemon Appeal and Account Record

Keep the appeal, the willing response and the conditional offer distinct.

Do not invent an offense or promise someone else's participation and call it the passage's command.

Hypothetical example: An adult checks whether repair help was actually offered before telling the family another person will pay.

01 Read the appeal Paul actually chooses

Record Paul's chosen manner of appeal and the relationship language he uses.

Paul's stated way of appealing

Relationship with Onesimus in the text

Historical question needing further study

02 Keep willingness and brotherhood together

Read willingness and the request to receive Onesimus together.

Words about willingness

Request to receive Onesimus

Unreported later outcome

03 Read the debt as conditional

Preserve the conditional wording about wrong and debt without inventing a charge.

Conditional wrong or debt wording

Offer Paul actually makes

Offense detail we must not invent

04 Refuse a coerced modern reenactment

Review one adult promise while retaining protective and legal responsibilities.

Modern promise an adult proposes

Consent or offer actually confirmed

Responsibility the analogy cannot override
