Check the Local Advisory Before Serving the Catch - working notes

One situation. Clear facts. An honest next step.

For locally caught fish, find the current advisory for the actual waterbody and species and follow its advice for the people eating it. An unfamiliar catch needs origin information before a meal promise.

Hypothetical example: A giver supplies the waterbody after the receiving adult asks. The adult reads that location's advisory before deciding whether the catch belongs in the planned meal.

01 Keep the catch attached to where it came from

Identify the catch's exact waterbody and species.

Waterbody identified

Species identified

Origin information still missing

02 Use the advisory for the actual waters

Find the current official consumption advisory.

Official advisory source

Date or version checked

Location and species match

Check the Local Advisory Before Serving the Catch - working notes / Review & follow-through

03 Match the household question to the advice

Read its applicable conditions and resolve questions.

Applicable conditions

Question for the responsible source

Meal decision pending or established

04 Share the advisory along with the food

Give the receiving cook the origin and actual decision.

Information traveling with the catch

Handling directions to follow separately

Receiving adult handoff