Third-Party Athlete Question Boundary

An individual athlete discussion needs an appropriate audience.

Courtesy does not require sharing another child's coaching or family details.

Hypothetical example: a spectator asks why a named athlete received an assignment, and the coach explains the public question route without revealing the child's private feedback.

01 Hear what the spectator is actually asking

Identify the spectator's actual practical request.

Question asked in actual words

Named athlete detail being requested

Practical issue that can be answered

02 Keep the individual explanation with the right audience

Check the individual information boundary.

Actual program sharing arrangement

Private information to keep out

Boundary words to use

Third-Party Athlete Question Boundary / Review & follow-through

03 Offer useful public information where it fits

Offer only appropriate public information or a route.

Confirmed public team information

Authorized question route

Reason no further explanation is needed

04 Separate a genuine concern from curiosity

Handle any genuine concern through the actual process.

Observed concern, if any

Responsible reporting route

Disclosure or wording requiring proper repair