Season Farewell Status

Close this season without claiming the next one.

Gratitude can honor completed work while leaving future participation open.

Hypothetical example: a coach thanks the team for a practiced arrival routine, includes the confirmed return instruction, and identifies the program contact for later updates.

01 Describe the season you can actually account for

Choose observed season work worth thanking.

Work or contribution actually observed

Result or date to verify

Shared-experience claim to avoid

02 Say what is ending and what remains

Identify what closes and any confirmed duty remaining.

Season responsibility now closing

Confirmed duty still remaining

Unconfirmed next-season detail

Season Farewell Status / Review & follow-through

03 Keep the farewell separate from private explanations

Protect private participation conversations.

Individual matter to keep private

Appropriate recognition permission

Current program contact

04 Give future information its actual status

Label future information as confirmed or undecided.

Future information actually confirmed

Return or role promise to correct

Authorized update route